

Transcribed Excerpt from the Newspaper Article about the Iowa Hawkeyes' Wave of Support, September 5, 2017

IOWA CITY — Battling a lung infection following a serious case of pneumonia, 8-year-old Zack Poe, on Saturday, really wasn't feeling well. He was in the hospital, for starters, on a first home football game for the Hawkeyes.

But his family took him anyway to the 12th floor in the new University of Iowa Stead Family Children's Hospital, which towers over Kinnick Stadium, and they joined dozens of other pediatric patients and families for a "press box" view of the action.

That was cool. And then the first quarter ended. And 68,000-plus fans turned and looked at him. They smiled, and they did a wave — not the typical wave you see at football games.