Introduction to Read Iowa History

About Read Iowa History

Through the Library of Congress Teaching with Primary Sources grant, the State Historical Society of Iowa developed Read Iowa History — free, downloadable K-5 lesson plans to build and develop reading and critical thinking skills with primary sources in the classroom.

Primary sources (from the digital Primary Source Sets collection) are used to help students learn from multiple perspectives, develop primary source-based claims and evidence, and to interpret documents and images of the past. These lessons were developed with the Iowa Core Social Studies and Literacy Standards. Each unit includes ready-to-use source material, worksheets, educator lesson plans and assessment tools and activities. You, the educator, are encouraged to explore the unit, and use materials as you see fit for your students. You are welcome to alter lesson plans, worksheets and assessments to best align with their curriculum.

Please check out the Primary Source Sets toolkit to learn more about using primary sources in the classroom.

What’s Included

Educator Materials

Sources are accompanied by an educator lesson plan. This plan includes: the unit compelling question, unit supporting question, objectives, background information, vocabulary list or cards, a materials list and instructions. There also is a “formative assessment” to wrap up each part of the unit and to check for comprehension. You are welcome to use the activities that are suggested or create their own with the primary sources.

Student Materials

Many of the unit instructions are accompanied by a worksheet that can be copied and distributed to students as they analyze the primary source(s) to assist in their application and comprehension. These worksheets are optional but may provide a structure for students to think critically about the primary sources they are analyzing. These reproduceable student worksheets are available in the student materials PDF (on website, below “Educator Materials) for this topic.

Formative Assessments, Lesson Summative Assessment and Scoring Options

The formative assessments, lesson summative assessment and possible scoring options allow you to evaluate how students comprehend and apply the knowledge they learned from the individual primary source activities. Assessment instructions, example worksheet(s) and possible scoring options are located at the end of this Read Iowa History section. Reproduceable assessment worksheet(s) also are available in this topic’s Student Materials PDF.

Right to Vote: Suffrage for African Americans

5th Grade

Overview
Voting is a fundamental process of democracy, but up until the Civil War, in most places, the right to vote in the United States was restricted to white males 21 years and older. Over the years, U.S. citizens’ have been denied voting rights based on race, gender, land ownership status, age, tribal membership and criminal convictions. Students will learn about the African-American suffrage movement, racist practices to keep them from the ballot box and the continued struggle over the authority of the federal government versus states rights. While African Americans were granted the right to vote nationally in 1870, many did not see that reality until 1965. In Iowa, African-American males were granted the right to vote in 1868, but not social equality.

How to Apply Read Iowa History Lessons to Other Primary Sources

The origin of Read Iowa History lessons stem from the Primary Source Sets, which are a collection of primary sources that focus on a topic and are structured under a compelling question and multiple supporting questions (typically three). Five or six primary sources are used to address and help students answer a single supporting question. Read Iowa History takes one supporting question, the primary sources addressing that question and instructions (divided into parts) to integrate these primary sources in the classroom through different activities.

These lessons, instructions, worksheets, tools and assessment suggestions can be applied to all of the K-5 Primary Source Sets.

Unit Compelling Question

The compelling question drives students to discuss, inquire and investigate the topic of a unit of understanding.

What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Questions

Supporting questions scaffold instruction to help students answer the compelling question. Their aim is to stimulate thought, to provoke inquiry and spark more questions. The supporting question that is highlighted above is the question that was used in this Read Iowa History. The bolded question below is the supporting question for this Read Iowa History unit.

1) How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?
2) How did women obtain the right to vote?
3) How did American Indians obtain the right to vote?

Background Essay

Utilize this background essay, in whole or in parts, with students to provide further context and understanding the African-American suffrage movement. You can read it aloud to students, utilize excerpts and introduce the vocabulary words. The essay is also referenced in parts of this Read Iowa History to assist students in their interpretation and analysis of primary sources.

Up until the Civil War, in most places, the right to vote in the United State was restricted to white males 21 years and older. Each state, not the federal government, established its own voter qualifications, but by far, adult white males accounted for almost all of the ballots cast. In the Dred Scott decision in 1857, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that enslaved people were the property of their owners, were not citizens and had no legal rights at all. A decade later, African Americans were not only free, but they were free citizens, and in Iowa, the path had been set to grant them the right to vote.

The first two constitutions adopted by the people of Iowa limited the suffrage (right to vote) to white males 21 years and older. While enslavement might have been illegal in Iowa, many state laws discriminated against African-American residents. The "black codes" that required African Americans to post financial bonds to live here and denied them the right to serve on juries were designed to discourage them from migrating to Iowa. A strong majority in the state opposed intermarriage between whites and African Americans and held that African Americans were not as intelligent as whites.

The Civil War began to reshape white attitudes toward African Americans. Iowa soldiers fighting in the South saw first-hand the evils of enslavement. Freeing enslaved people where the Union Army took control weakened the strength of the Confederate Army. Furthermore, after the southern surrender, the Republican Party was eager to grant African Americans the right to vote because they anticipated their votes would be strongly Republican, the party of Abraham Lincoln and the opponents of their former masters.

At the behest of Alexander Clark, an African American and Iowan who fought in the Civil War, Iowa voters (entirely white males) went to the polls and approved a constitutional amendment striking the word “white” from voting requirements in 1868. A man, African American or white, could vote in Iowa if he was 21 years old and a resident. At the same time, the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution forbade any state from denying the vote to anyone on the basis of race, color or previous condition of servitude (slavery). Until the Great Depression in the 1930s, African Americans tended to adhere to the Republicans who had fought to end slavery and grant them their freedom. New Deal programs that provided direct relief to the desperately poor, which included both whites and African Americans, won over many African-American voters to the Democrats.

Introducing Voting Rights in America

Unit Compelling Question
What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Question
How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?

Overview
Students will be introduced to the unit compelling question through analysis of a modern topic, “Should a person who lost their right to vote because of a felony conviction in Iowa have their voting rights restored?” This pre-lesson activity will also provide context for students about the suffrage movements of African Americans, women and American Indians in the United States.

Instructions

1. Distribute a copy of “Equality at the Ballot Box” background essay and Close Read of “Equality at the Ballot Box” worksheet to each student. This essay introduces all three suffrage movements for women, African Americans and Native Americans as covered in the primary source set. Depending on the time available, focusing on the introduction, African-American section and the conclusion will be enough for the content in this lesson.

2. Do a close reading of the passage.
   - First reading: You will read the article aloud to your class without stopping.
   - Second reading: Students will read and mark text by underlining important keywords, drawing a question mark next to parts that need clarification and drawing a box around parts that help us answer the unit supporting question.
   - Third reading: Students will re-read a third time as needed while answering the questions from the student worksheet.

3. Optional Literacy Connections: Often, introductory phrases and transition words are used to signal to the reader that an important idea is coming next. A mini-lesson on introductory phrases and/or a mini-lesson on signal words may be important to integrate into this lesson. Question #1 from the student worksheet asks students to paraphrase the main ideas that come right after the underlined introductory phrases. Note that not all of the introductory phrases were underlined in the text, only the major ones.

4. Pique student curiosity and introduce the lesson topic. Tell students: “Our democratic government places decision-making power into the hands of voters. But who should be able to cast a vote? Over time, the rules about who can vote have changed many times. Should Iowans convicted of a felony have their voting rights restored?”

5 To assist students in this discussion, share with them information about the issue. Below are some recommended resources:

- Video: KCCI - “Why Restoring Voting Rights for Felons is Harder in Iowa,” 2016 (2 min.)
- Video: Iowa PBS Recording of the Condition of the State, 2019 (3 min. - start at 39:50, end at 42:25)
- Text: Terry Sallis of Newton, Iowa, shares what having his right to vote restored meant to him.

6 After reviewing resources, discuss with students: “Should a person who lost their right to vote because of a felony conviction in Iowa have their voting rights restored?”

7 In order to build context, students will do a close reading of the secondary source in order to gain background information and essential vocabulary about the topic.

8 At the end of this lesson, students will write an essay answering the question, “How have laws changed over time in order to restrict, protect, or extend African American suffrage?” Using what they learned in the article as a starting point, students will ask and then categorize questions about African Americans voting in Iowa. Students will independently, then with a partner, brainstorm questions. They will then share questions with the class. Be looking for common patterns of the kinds, or topics, of the questions. Record these as possible categories that students will use to categorize information, and thus be the topics of paragraphs, in their final essay.

9 Formative Assessment: As students generate questions, listen for the misconceptions that often emerge as students negotiate wording of the questions. Offer information to correct misconceptions that will not be addressed in the remainder of the lesson.
Up until the Civil War, in most places, the right to vote in the United States was restricted to white males 21 years and older. At that time, each state, not the federal government, set rules about who could vote.

African-American Suffrage
In 1857, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that enslaved people were property of their owners, not citizens, and had no legal rights at all. Ten years and a Civil War later, African Americans were not only free, but they were free citizens. In Iowa, the path had been set to grant them the right to vote.

The first two Iowa constitutions adopted in 1846 and 1857 limited suffrage (the right to vote) to white males 21 years and older. While enslavement might have been illegal in Iowa, many state laws still discriminated against African Americans. The “Black Codes” that required African Americans to post financial bonds to live here and denied them the right to serve on juries were designed to discourage African Americans from moving to Iowa. A strong majority in the state opposed interracial marriage and dehumanized and discriminated against African Americans.

The Civil War began to reshape white attitudes toward African Americans. Iowa soldiers fighting in the South saw the evils of enslavement firsthand. After the southern surrender, the Republican Party was eager to grant African Americans the right to vote because they anticipated their votes would be strongly Republican, the political party of Abraham Lincoln and the opponents of their former masters.

In 1868, white male lowans (the only lowans who could vote) approved a constitutional amendment striking the word “white” from voting requirements - partly due to the organizing work of notable civil rights activist Alexander Clark. As a result, a man of any race could vote in Iowa if he was 21 years old and a resident. At the same time, the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution outlawed denying the right to vote to anyone on the basis of race, color or previous enslavement status.

Women's Suffrage
While African-American males were winning the right to vote, advocates for women's suffrage saw an opportunity to advance their cause. Carrie Lane Chapman Catt, who was raised in Iowa, rose to the head of a national association promoting women's suffrage. Early victories in several western states led women's advocates to believe that they could soon gain the right to vote across the nation, but it remained a tough battle.

Around the turn of the century, women were allowed to vote on referendums like bond issues, but not in “elections” where there are candidates. This was known as the partial suffrage.

In 1916, Iowa votes (still all male) narrowly defeated a women’s suffrage amendment that would have struck the word “male” from the state’s voting requirements. Nevertheless, when Congress submitted the 19th amendment to the U.S. Constitution to the states for ratification, the Iowa legislature approved it. In the 1920 elections, women across the United States went to the polls. Later in the decade, Iowa women won the right to serve on juries and be elected to public office.

American-Indian Suffrage
American Indians had a long and complex legal status within the United States. The tribes were considered separate nations, and the U.S. government signed treaties with them just as if they were other countries. In most cases, American Indians could not vote unless they left their tribes. Partly in recognition of their military service in WWI, Congress passed the Snyder Act in 1924 granting full citizenship to Native Americans whether they remained on tribal lands or moved into mainstream society. This included the right to vote. The 26th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was ratified in 1971. It expanded the right to vote in federal elections to citizens 18 years and older, lowering the legal voting age from 21. Each state had to approve it.

Over time, laws in the United States have both restricted and extended the right to vote. The number of legal voters has expanded widely since the U.S. Constitution was adopted. Voting is the most basic right of each citizen, and who gets the right to cast a ballot for elected leaders has been a widely debated issue. Today, there is a debate over whether those who have committed a felony should have the vote, even after they have served their time. Other issues may still surface.

African-American Suffrage in Iowa

Unit Compelling Question
What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Question
How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?

Overview
Students will use primary sources to learn about the history of African-American suffrage in Iowa. The lesson will focus on why 1868 was a pivotal year for African Americans in Iowa and about the advocacy efforts of Alexander Clark and the governor of Iowa at the time, William M. Stone.

Source Background
In 1866, the Iowa legislature began amending the state's constitution to remove the word “white” from the suffrage article, as well as articles about census taking, districting of representatives to the legislature and the state militia. Later in 1868, civil rights leader Alexander Clark successfully filed a lawsuit against the Muscatine school board to fight school desegregation, and the Iowa Supreme Court ruled in his favor, desegregating Iowa schools 86 years before the landmark U.S. Supreme Court case, Brown v. Board of Education. Additional information can also be found in the background essay and in the “The Negro Suffrage Issue” article from The Annals of Iowa, published by the State Historical Society of Iowa.

Instructions

1. Distribute an “Analyze a Primary Source” worksheet to students to complete.

2. First, students will analyze a primary source together. Display the portrait of Iowa Gov. William M. Stone.

3. Read the information aloud for the Stone portrait found on the worksheet. Read it aloud to students twice. Model fluent reading the first time and pausing to discuss when reading the second time.

4. Discuss the information. Have students answer these source-dependent questions.

   - Stone served in the Union Army during the Civil War. How could William Stone’s past have shaped his views on African-American suffrage?
   - In 1868, during Governor Stone’s term in office, the Iowa Legislature amended the state’s constitution to remove the word “white” from the suffrage article, which if passed would allow all men over 21 years old the right to vote. Over 56.5 percent of Iowa voters approved the amendment to Iowa’s constitution. How did this change the life for people, both white and African American, living in Iowa?

5 Now, students will analyze a primary source with a partner. Using those same steps, students work with a partner to analyze Alexander Clark’s speech at the “Colored Convention” in Des Moines, Iowa in its entirety. Below are source-dependent questions for the speech.
- What founding document does Alexander Clark refer to in his speech? How does he say this document supports the cause of African-American suffrage?
- Clark asks for suffrage equality, but what equality does he say he is not asking for? What impact might that have on the daily lives of Iowans?
- According to the third excerpt, what injustice would be happening if African-American suffrage was denied to Iowa citizens?

6 Have students discuss their answers with the entire class.

7 Formative Assessment: Listen to students as they work with a partner. Notice any misconceptions about founding documents or terminology. If the same misconception is heard more than once, it needs to be addressed with the whole class during discussion. For example, if students are confused about the difference between the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, briefly talk about those documents.

Alexander Clark’s Speech at the “Colored Convention” in Des Moines, Iowa, 1868
ADDRESS

OF THE COLORED STATE CONVENTION TO THE PEOPLE OF IOWA IN BEHALF OF THEIR ENFRANCHISEMENT.

PREPARED AND DELIVERED TO THE CONVENTION BY A. CLARK, CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON ADDRESS, FEB. 13TH, 1868.

To the People of Iowa: To every true, honest and liberty-loving citizen of Iowa do the colored men of your proud commonwealth appeal for sympathy and aid in securing those rights and privileges which belong to us as freemen. Having established our claim to the proud title of American soldiers and shared in the glories won by the deeds of the true men of our own color, will you not heed and hear our appeal? We appeal to the sense of justice of the Legislature and of the people of our own State, for those rights of citizenship without which our well-earned freedom is but a shadow. We ask no privilege; we simply ask you to recognize our claim to manhood by giving to us that right without which we have no power to defend ourselves from unjust legislation, and no voice in the government we have endeavored to preserve. Being men, we claim to be of that number comprehended in the Declaration of Independence, and who are entitled not only to life, but to equal rights in the pursuit and securing of happiness and in the choice of those who are to rule over us. Deprived of this, we are forced to pay taxes without representation; to submit, without appeal, to laws however offensive, without a single voice in framing them; to bear arms without the right to say whether against friend or foe—against loyalty or disloyalty. Without suffrage, we are forced into strict subjection to a government whose councils are to us foreign, and are called by our own countrymen to witness a violence upon the primary principles of a republican government as gross and outrageous as that which justly stirred patriot Americans to throw overboard the tea from English bottoms in a Boston harbor and to wage war for Independence. Let a consistent support be given to this principle of government, founded only “on the consent of the governed”—to this keystone in the arch of American liberty—and our full rights as freemen are secured. Our demands are not excessive; we ask not for social equality with the white man, as is often claimed by the shallow demagogue; for a law higher than human must forever govern social relations. We ask only that privilege which is now given to every white, native-born or adopted, male citizen of our State—the privilege of the ballot-box. We ask that the word “white” be stricken from the Constitution of our State; that the organic law of our State shall give to suffrage irrevocable guarantees that shall know of no distinction at the polls on account of color; and in this we simply ask that the “two streams of loyal blood which it took to conquer one, mad with treason,” shall not be separated at the ballot-box; that he who can be trusted with an army musket, which makes victory and protects the nation, shall also be intrusted with that boon of American liberty, the ballot, to express a preference for his rulers and his laws. We demand this as native-born citizens of the United States, and who have never known other allegiance than to its authority and the laws of our State, and as those who have been true and loyal to our government from its foundation to the present time, and who have never deserted its interest whilst even in the midst of treason and under subjection to its most violent enemies. We ask, in the honored name of 200,000 colored troops, five hundred of whom were from our own Iowa, who, with the first opportunity, enlisted under the flag of our country and the banner of our State, and bared their breasts to the remorseless storm of treason, and by hundreds went down to death in the conflict, whilst the franchised rebels and their cowardly friends, the new bitter enemies of our right to suffrage, remained in quiet at home, safe, and fattened on the fruits of our sacrifice, toil and blood. We make these demands as one of right and necessity, if not expediency, and are unwilling to believe that a powerful, ruling people, strengthened by new victories with the aid of our hands, could be less magnanimous in purpose and in action, less consistent with the true theory of a sound democracy, than to concede to us our claims. We believe that with expediency even our demands are not at war, but that with right does public policy strike hands and unite our votes, as it did our muskets, to the maintenance of authority over the disorganizing elements which attend a returning peace. We have too much faith in the permanency of this government to believe that the extension of the elective franchise to a few loyal colored men could unsettle its foundation or violate a single declaration of its rights. Therefore we will not believe but that the people of Iowa will be the first to do full justice to the men of color, as they have been among the foremost in upholding the flag of our country. We rejoice in the fact, and congratulate the people of our own color in every part of the land that in the recent State election Col. Merrill has been chosen to the gubernatorial chair, and the entire Republican State ticket elected by the handsome majority of nearly thirty thousand votes, and that they stand as firm on the manhood suffrage issue as did their predecessors. In this can the colored men of Iowa take courage, and say to our white friends, we are Americans by birth and we assure you that we are Americans in feeling; and in spite of all the wrongs which we have long and silently endured in this our native country, we would yet exclaim, with a full heart, “O, America! with all thy faults, we love thee still.”

Portrait of Governor William M. Stone, 1868

This portrait is of William M. Stone, who would serve as Iowa's Republican governor during the end of the Civil War. Before being elected, he was a decorated officer in the Union Army, and at one point, had been a prisoner of war during the Civil War. Stone also was a lawyer and held several governmental offices during his lifetime. During the Republican convention of 1865, a prominent issue was African-American suffrage. The Republican Party largely supported political equality for African Americans, though most believed that social equality was not to be obtained. In 1866, the Iowa legislature began amending the state's constitution to remove the word “white” from the suffrage article. In 1868, the men of Iowa 21 years of age or older — who were the only ones with the right to vote at that time — voted for African-American suffrage with 56.5 percent of the vote.

1. William Stone served in the Union Army during the Civil War, and at one point, was a prisoner of war. How could Stone's past have shaped his views on African-American suffrage?

Alexander Clark's Speech to Iowa State Colored Convention, 1868

Alexander Clark, an African-American barber turned lawyer from Muscatine, became a hero of African-American rights in the state of Iowa. In this address to the “Colored Convention” in Des Moines, Clark calls for the Iowa legislature to approve and then place before the voters the removal of the word “white” from voting laws within the Iowa Constitution. The vote passed, and Iowa became the first state in the nation to have a successful grassroots movement for African-American suffrage.

Deprived of this, we are forced to pay taxes without representation; to submit, without appeal, to laws however offensive, without a single voice in framing them; to bear arms without the right to say whether against friend or foe -- against loyalty or disloyalty."

2. What founding document does Alexander Clark refer to in his speech? How does he say this document supports the cause of African-American suffrage?
Analyze a Primary Source

Excerpt 2

“Our demands are not excessive; we ask not for social equality with the white man, as is often claimed by the shallow demagogue; for a law higher than human must forever govern social relations. We ask only that privilege which is no given to every white, native-born or adopted, male citizen of our State - the privilege of the ballot-box.”

3. Alexander Clark asks for suffrage equality, but what equality does he say he is not asking for? What impact might that have on the daily lives of Iowans?
* (Think back to the “black codes” mentioned in the “Equality at the Ballot Box” background essay)*

Excerpt 3

“...that he who can be trusted with an army musket, which makes victory and protects the nation, shall also be intrusted with that boon of American liberty, the ballot, to express a preference for his rulers and his laws.”

4. According to this third excerpt, what injustice would be happening if African-American suffrage was denied to Iowa citizens?

5. Write one sentence summarizing these two sources. Include the words: Iowa, vote and equality.

African-American Suffrage in the United States

Unit Compelling Question
What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Question
How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?

Overview
This lesson focuses on the history of African-American suffrage in the United States. Students will learn about the passage of the 15th Amendment in the U.S. Constitution. It was passed in 1870, and paved the way to citizenship (and voting rights) for African Americans.

Source Background
Source 1: This illustration shows African-American men in outfits indicative of their professions standing in a line waiting for their turn to vote. The text belong the image reads, “The First Vote.” This print was published in Harper’s Weekly on November 16, 1867.

Source 2: The 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution was ratified on February 3, 1870, and prohibited federal and state governments from denying any citizen the right to vote based on that person’s “race, color or previous condition of servitude.” The amendment was important in that it not only gave African Americans the right to vote, but also allowed the most African Americans in history to be elected into public office. This print shows a parade surrounded by portraits and vignettes of African-American life, illustrating rights granted by the 15th Amendment.

Instructions
1. Display “The First Vote” illustration for students to analyze. Consider displaying the larger document on a screen or giving students access to the image.

2. Discuss the image and answer the questions that are on the “Analyze a Primary Source” worksheet. If students are new to analyzing primary source images, consider using the image analysis tool, “Be An Image Detective!” to analyze the image.

3. Since the goal is to get a general overview of the source, expedite the process by having students talk through the items on the analysis rather than writing their responses.

4. Students will now analyze the images with a partner. Using the same steps that were used to analyze the first source, have the partners analyze “The 15th Amendment” image.

5. Formative Assessment: Observe as students work.

Analyze a Primary Source

A version of this worksheet is available for reproduction to students in this topic's Student Materials PDF.

“The First Vote” Illustration, November 16, 1867

This iconic illustration was created by A.R. Waud and published in Harper’s Weekly. It shows African-American men, dressed in clothing showing their professions (skilled craftsman, sophisticated city dweller and a Union Army veteran), in a line waiting their turn to vote. An American flag hangs as a ceiling over the mens’ heads. A white election official looks on as the first man drops his vote into the container.

1. Each of the men in the line is dressed differently. What does their clothing represent?

2. Define these important events in American history that had recently taken place before this drawing was published in Harper’s Weekly magazine. (Civil War: 1861-1865)

   - Emancipation Proclamation, 1863
   - The Fifteenth Amendment, 1870

   3. What might be the drawbacks of having to vote out in the open where everyone can see who you voted for?

“The Fifteenth Amendment,” 1870

This print shows a parade surrounded by portraits and vignettes of African-American life, illustrating the rights granted by the 15th amendment.

- The Fifteenth Amendment: Reading Emancipation Proclamation; Life Liberty and Independence; We Unite the Bonds of Fellowship; Our Chart of Rights - the Holy Scriptures; Education will prove the Equality [of] the Races; Liberty Property, the Marriage Alter; Celebration of fifteenth Amendment May 19th, 1870; The Ballot Box is open to us; Our representative sits in the National Legislature; The Holy ordinances of religion are free; Freedom unites the Family Circle; We will protect our Country as it defends our Rights; We till our own Fields; The Right of Citizens of the U.S. to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the U.S. or any State on account of Race Color or Condition of Servitude, 15th Amendment

4. What suffrage rights are guaranteed for all United States citizens by the 15th Amendment?
Impact of Jim Crow Laws

Unit Compelling Question
What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Question
How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?

Overview
This lesson focuses on the impact of Jim Crow laws. Students will analyze multiple primary sources to determine the impact of these discriminatory laws on the African-American right to vote.

Source Background

Source 1: This statistical atlas of the United States is based on the results of the 11th census, completed in 1890, shows the distribution of the “colored population” of the country.

Source 2: After the Civil War, many states enacted literacy tests as a voting requirement. The purpose was to exclude persons with minimal literacy, in particular, poor African Americans in the South, from voting. This was achieved by asking these prospective voters to interpret abstract provisions of the U.S. Constitution or rejecting their applications for errors. This sample voter registration application, featuring a literacy test, was used by W.C. Patton, head of the NAACP voter registration program, to educate African-American voters in Alabama.

Source 3: This photograph by Warren Leffler shows African-American demonstrators outside the White House, with signs reading “We demand the right to vote, everywhere” and protesting police brutality against civil rights demonstrators in Selma, Alabama. On August 6, 1965, U.S. President Lyndon B. Johnson signed the Voting Rights Act of 1965 into law. This law gave the federal government the authority and funding to ensure that all legal-age citizens were allowed to vote in all states, without obstructions such as literacy tests, thus fully enacting the 15th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

Source 4: This interview is of Charles Siler, who remembers his early life in Louisiana. He joined the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) in Baton Rouge. He was drafted in 1967 and served in the military in the Vietnam War. He continued his civil rights advocacy as he took a variety of positions at cultural institutions and began a career as a cartoonist.

Instructions

1. Share each source’s background information as you introduce it to the class. Display the first source, “Distribution of the Colored Population” map. Consider displaying the images/documents on a screen or giving students access to the sources via a device.

2. Explain to students that maps tell a story just like a narrative text. Ask them: What story is this map telling us? Discuss the map and answer the questions on the “Analyze a Primary Source” worksheet.

Instructions continued

3 Using those same steps, students will work with a partner to analyze the Voter Registration Literacy Test and the "African-American Demonstrators" image. Use the image analysis tool, "Be An Image Detective!" worksheet to analyze the primary source.

4 Students should be ready to analyze the interview (four-minute clip, from 1:35:07 to 1:38:55) independently. They will record their observations with the worksheet. However, it may be logistically easier to show the video to the class as a group instead.

5 Formative Assessment: Listen to students as they work with a partner. Notice any misconceptions about founding documents or terminology. If the same misconception is heard more than once, it needs to be addressed with the whole class during discussion. For example, if students are confused about the difference between the Declaration of Independence and the U.S. Constitution, briefly talk about those documents.

Distribution of the Colored Population of the United States in 1890, 1898

This is a statistical atlas of the United States that is based on the results of the 11th U.S. Census, completed in 1890, shows the distribution of the “colored population” of the country. As can be seen in the distribution map, members of the targeted population predominantly resided in the southeast.

1. Which states had the highest African-American population in 1890?

2. What impact might the 15th Amendment have had on different regions of the United States? Remember, the 15th Amendment states that “The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.”

Voter Registration Literacy Test in Alabama, 1964

After the Civil War, many states enacted literacy tests as a voting requirement. The purpose was to exclude persons with minimal reading skills, in particular poor African Americans in the South, from voting.

This was achieved by asking these prospective voters to explain less well known parts of the U.S. Constitution or rejecting their applications for errors. Literacy tests, along with other Jim Crow laws and “black codes,” were put in place to limit the rights of African Americans.

This sample voter registration application, featuring a literacy test, was used by W.C. Patton, head of the NAACP voter registration program, to educate black voters in Alabama before they went to register to vote.

2. Based on that information, infer which one changes faster: laws or public opinion?

Challenge Question: Explain how the laws in place in August 1965 influence the interactions between different groups in society, such as protestors & lawmakers; citizens of different races in Selma, Alabama; or African-American citizens in Selma and government officials.

Charles Siler remembers his early life in Louisiana, including enjoying drawing, quitting the Boy Scouts when his troop made black Scouts walk behind the horses in a local parade, and picketing Louisiana's segregated state library as a senior in high school. He was expelled from Southern University because of his activism. He joined the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. He continued his civil rights advocacy as he took a variety of positions at cultural institutions and began a career as a cartoonist. The interview closes with Siler's reflections on identity and learning from those whose views on life are different.

Excerpt: Watch this four-minute clip -- from 1:35:07 to 1:38:55

1. According to Charles Siler, how many attempts did it take Mrs. Williams before she was allowed to register to vote? Why it might have taken Williams so many attempts? (Refer to the voter registration literacy test)

2. What significance did registering to vote have for Williams? Why do you think it was important for her to vote before she died?

3. Why does Siler get upset when people tell them they are not going to vote?

4. Use all of the primary sources in Part 4 to make a conclusion about why places like Selma, Alabama, were hotbed locations for African-American suffrage. Include the words: enslavement, suffrage, Jim Crow laws and equality.
Unit Compelling Question
What opportunities does the right to vote provide?

Unit Supporting Question
How did African Americans obtain the right to vote?

Overview
Students will evaluate the evidence they collected as they analyze primary sources and they will answer the questions that accompany them. Students will finalize the category labels, organize evidence and discuss what they found.

Instructions
1. Take students back to the “Asking Questions” section from the Pre-Lesson Activity. Review the categories the class brainstormed. After analyzing all of these primary sources, do any of those categories make sense to talk about when answering the question: How have suffrage laws changed over time for African Americans?

2. Students will write their thesis statement (the answer to the supporting question) and then the categories for their evidence. Some possibilities are listed below:

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Thesis Statement: Laws have...</th>
<th>Categories</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>...restricted or extended suffrage</td>
<td>restricted, extended</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>...changed for some but not for others</td>
<td>Iowa, Southern states</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>...always gotten better</td>
<td>Iowa, 15th Amendment, Voting Rights Act</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>...changed after people fought for them</td>
<td>Alexander Clark in Iowa, NAACP in Southern States</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

3. Distribute the “Gathering Evidence” worksheet to students to complete. Complete the first category as an example for students, though they can form their own thesis statement and categories and not need to use the examples.

4. Students will choose the categories they want to talk about in their essay. Not all category boxes on the “Gathering Evidence” paper have to be filled in.

5. Students can independently select and record evidence from the answers to the questions along with their own background knowledge and/or source analysis beyond the questions listed in this lesson. As needed, remind students to use previous worksheets that contain key ideas to help them answer the questions.

6. Students will present, defend, clarify and discuss the evidence. They will share out their thesis and categories. Group students together based on their thesis statements. Have groups physically move to separate areas of the classroom. Also, make a group for undecided students.

Evaluating Primary Sources and Recording Evidence

7. Within their group, give students time to discuss why they picked that thesis. The undecided group should focus on what they want to clarify or what questions they have.

8. Start the conversation by asking one group to share the evidence they used to support their answer. Then move on to other groups to tell theirs.

9. Ask the undecided group if anyone wants to move to a group based on what they heard. If someone does, have them explain why they are relocating.

10. Open up the discussion for questions, clarification, and negotiation of thinking. Don't skip this step! It gives students a chance to test out their ideas before they write about them in the essay, even for those students who remain quiet the majority of the time. Their internal negotiation is key to solidifying understanding.

11. Formative Assessment: Observe as students work.

Assessment Instructions

1. It is now time for students to assemble their evidence into an essay. The good news is that they have already been putting it together throughout the lesson as they have answered the questions.

2. Distribute lesson summative assessment worksheet. Give students plenty of time to write. Students are welcome to go back to the sources and the answers to their questions as they write.

3. Language Arts Connections
   - Hook Sentences: designed to introduce the topic, get the reader's attention, and make them want to read more
   - Thesis: statement clearly taking a position on and answering the big question, the “answer”
   - Evidence: fact or information the author uses to support their thesis, the “fact”
   - Reasoning: how the evidence connects to the thesis, the “why”

4. For students who do not want to be confined by the lines in the graphic organizer, they can write on notebook paper or even type their essay. Have them keep the worksheet nearby in order to consider the prompts that are in each section.

5. If possible, have students put the essay away for a couple of days. Then take it back out for revision and editing before turning in the final essay.
