THE CHRONICLE.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4, 1813.

The progress of regulations is too plain to be concealed. The general officers are in a situation to be the means of bringing peace and happiness to the country. And when the nation shall be enabled to enjoy the pleasures of a free community, the wish and the hope of peace will be the most powerful means of preserving it.

J. M. PETERSON.

THE CHRONICLE.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 4, 1813.

The progress of regulations is too plain to be concealed. The general officers are in a situation to be the means of bringing peace and happiness to the country. And when the nation shall be enabled to enjoy the pleasures of a free community, the wish and the hope of peace will be the most powerful means of preserving it.

J. M. PETERSON.